Foreword

Through the Social Enterprise Scotland ‘Buy Social Catalogue’ social enterprises are transforming supply chains by delivering high-quality services that create real social value.

Across Scotland, these partnerships that are embedding social enterprises within public and private sectors supply chains are bringing benefits to both parties, proving that business success and community impact can go hand in hand.

These partnerships are creating inclusive growth across Scotland communities.

By buying more from social enterprises, businesses and public sector organisations can access quality products and services while advancing social value, aligning procurement with Scotland’s vision for a wellbeing economy.

I am delighted to present a refresh of this catalogue, with a total of 176 businesses signing up, offering even more opportunities to create positive social impact through supply chains.

Kate Forbes MSP

Deputy First Minister of Scotland

Scottish Government

Introduction

Scotland's economy is evolving. More businesses, public bodies and communities are recognising that social enterprises and inclusive business models can deliver growth, create jobs and make a tangible difference in communities.

For the private sector, the message is straightforward: social procurement is not a gesture, it's good business. Social enterprises deliver professional services, innovation and agility. Working with them can strengthen supply chains, open up new markets and reduce risk, while also helping meet ESG commitments. Every contract awarded delivers a product or service, but it also keeps wealth local, tackles inequality and creates genuine social and environmental impact. At a time when customers and investors are looking for evidence, not statements, these partnerships speak for themselves.

For the public sector, social procurement is a practical way to deliver policy intent. Social enterprises sit at the heart of Scotland's Wellbeing Economy, providing high-quality goods and services while reinvesting profits into social and environmental outcomes. Including them in procurement plans supports community wealth building, inclusive growth and fair work. Local authorities and agencies already use Census data to understand their local economies. We're now exploring how that insight can be shared more locally, so communities can use it themselves to plan, influence and act.

The Social Enterprise Scotland Supplier Catalogue is more than a directory. It's a practical tool for buyers who want to work differently. It helps private firms and public bodies identify social enterprises that are ready to deliver quality, innovation and impact. Whether you're sourcing professional services, food and catering, circular economy solutions or digital services, the suppliers listed here are ready to deliver. Our partners across the Edinburgh and South/East Scotland City Region Deal, especially Edinburgh Social Enterprise Network, have played a vital role in making this happen and show what strong regional collaboration can achieve.

The invitation is simple: use the catalogue, start conversations and embed social enterprises in your supply chains. If we do that consistently, we can build an economy that is more resilient, more inclusive and better connected to the communities it serves.

Chris Martin,
Chief Executive Officer
Social Enterprise Scotland

Regional View

The Edinburgh and South/East Scotland City Region Deal is a Scottish and UK Government investment programme aimed at accelerating growth, creating new economic opportunities and creating meaningful new jobs to help reduce inequalities.

To further the impact of spend of the ESES CRD projects, the ESES Communities team set about creating the ESES City Region Deal Social Business Directory to help encourage opportunities within the deal supply chains, by linking contractors with socially minded organisations to encourage local spend and collaboration.

“It’s incredibly gratifying to see the Edinburgh and South/East Scotland City Region Deal’s Social Business Directory serve as such a strong model. We invested in building a resource that would truly connect and amplify the impact of our region’s social enterprises and CIC’s.

To witness Social Enterprise Scotland taking inspiration from our work and developing a national version is a testament to the directory’s effectiveness. It proves that local innovation, driven by real community needs, can indeed shape national policy and practice. We’re proud to have played a part in encouraging a more connected and supportive environment for socially focused businesses across Scotland.”

Andy Nichol,
*Head of Programme Management Office,
Edinburgh and South/East Scotland (ESES)

The Buy Social Pledge

As part of our wider Buy Social Scotland programme, the Suppliers' Catalogue showcases the breadth and quality of social enterprise suppliers operating across Scotland. It has been developed to make it easier for private and public sector organisations to discover, connect with, and buy from social enterprises. Alongside the catalogue, the Buy Social Pledge offers a practical route for organisations to embed purpose into their procurement and supply chain activity.

Supported by the Scottish Government, the Buy Social Pledge is a values-led partnership connecting businesses and public bodies with social enterprises that deliver real impact. Taking the Buy Social Pledge is the first step in using your purchasing power for good, helping to build community wealth and support a sustainable economy.

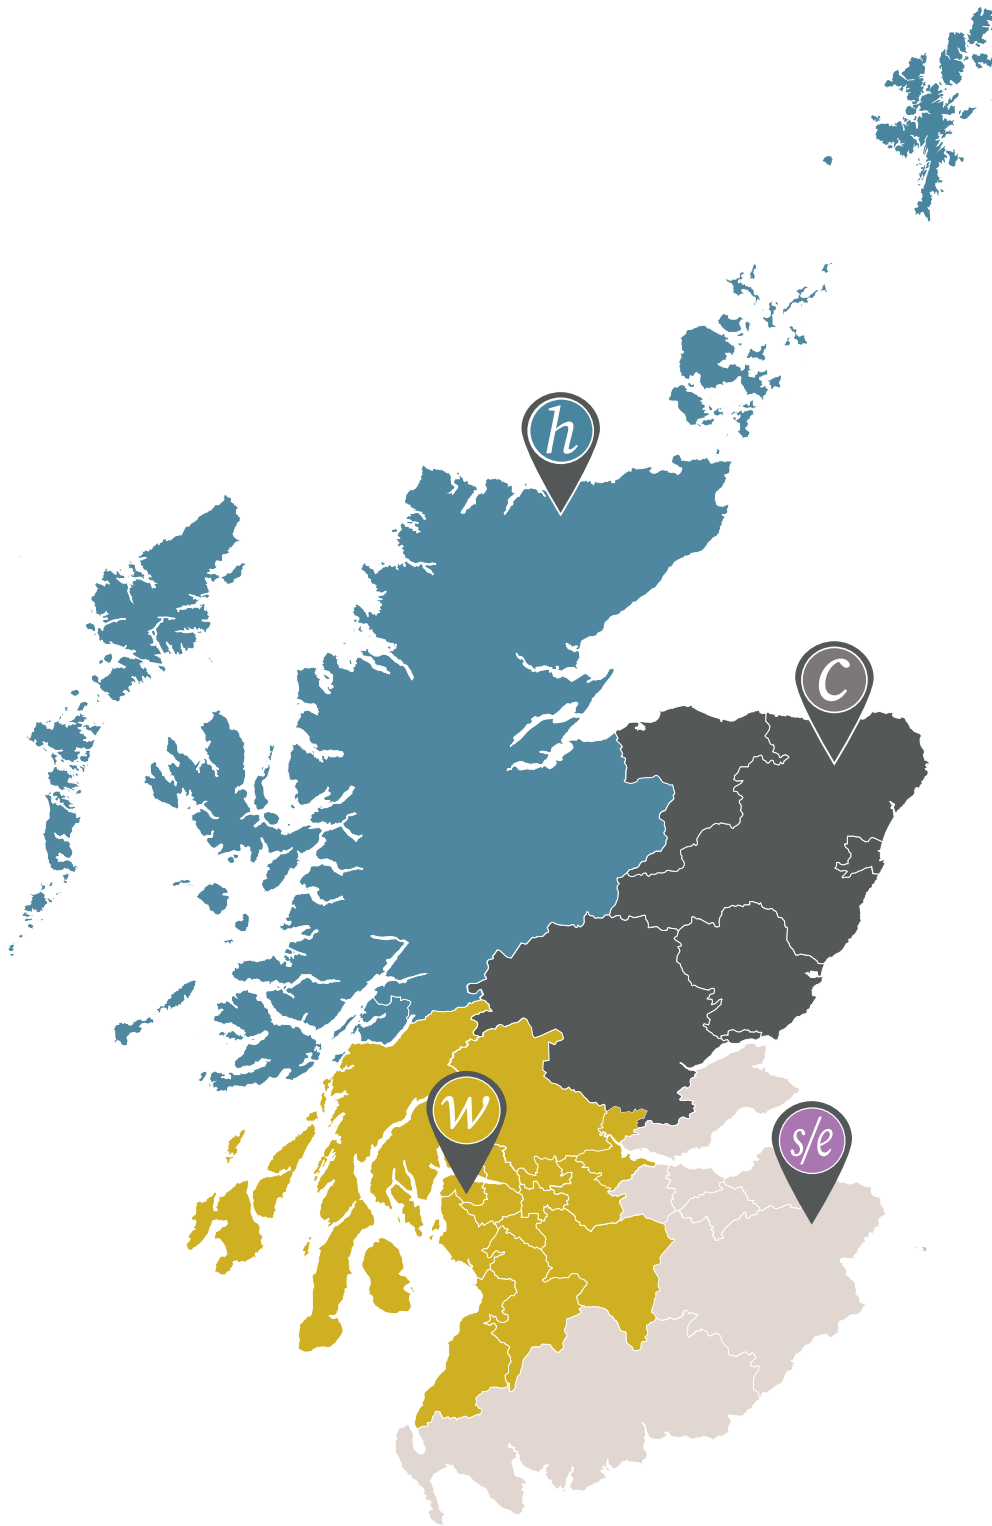

The pledge sees organisations commit to 5 key actions:

1. Recognise Fair Work for All – champion fair work principles, prioritise Real Living Wages, narrow the Gender Pay Gap, foster Equality, Diversity and Inclusion and eradicate zero-hour contracts
2. Environmental Impact for a Sustainable Tomorrow – embrace a net zero policy
3. Support Social Enterprises – onboard and promote social enterprises within their supply chains, helping to foster an ecosystem that nurtures and supports these invaluable organisations, amplifying their positive impact.
4. Prompt Payment, Ethical Business – organisations will commit to prompt payment, resulting in ethical business relationships.
5. Measure Positive Impact – Commit transparency and accountability by reporting annual spend with social enterprises.

The Buy Social Pledge recognises the huge role supply chains can play in driving positive change. It aims to make it easier for businesses, the public sector, and SMEs to engage with a range of social enterprise suppliers and to embed corporate responsibility and diversity into their core operations, while helping social enterprise organisations to grow their revenues and in turn, the positive social and environmental impact they deliver in communities.

Join a growing movement of businesses committed to using their purchasing power for good.

Circular Economy

Location: South/East

Covers: City of Edinburgh

What: We lend a wide range of items to Edinburgh residents, keeping goods in circulation, reducing landfill waste, and cutting household clutter. By offering access instead of ownership, we help keep wealth within the community rather than flowing to large corporations. We track the total cost of items borrowed versus bought to measure community wealth, alongside the kilograms of plastic diverted from landfill and related carbon savings. Beyond lending, we run a small repair station for clothes and household items, helping people extend product life. We also host creative upcycling, repair, and sustainability workshops — all included in our membership, which offers item rentals, discounted workshops, and repair support to promote a thriving circular economy in Edinburgh.

We offer: In addition to our corporate membership tiers, we offer corporate packages of individual memberships for rewarding or incentivizing staff. We also offer donation collection services and corporate rentals, if you've got items in good working order that can remain in circulation.

City of Edinburgh, Dundee City, Fife, Glasgow City, International, Scotland-wide

www.facebook.com/familiesintrauma

What: We're a peer-led, lived experience organisation focused on one-to-one support - we deliver engaging training that supports staff wellbeing and organisational development. Our sessions are grounded in real stories, shared experiences, and practical learning from working alongside people every day. We bring to life the realities of mental health in the workplace, helping managers and teams to move beyond policies and connect with what staff may actually be experiencing. We explore how to build open, supportive cultures, have confident conversations about mental health, and empower colleagues rather than simply manage them.

We offer: This interactive training program is designed for staff and managers who want to strengthen workplace culture, reduce stigma, and build confidence in supporting colleagues' wellbeing. Through real stories and guided discussions, managers will gain skills to spot early signs of distress, have supportive conversations, and encourage recovery-focused approaches. The course promotes a culture of openness, dignity, and mutual support—equipping staff with the awareness and confidence to help themselves and others thrive at work.

Location: West

Covers: UK-wide

www.goodcocoabean.co.uk

What: Good Cocoa Bean was set up to help provide sustainable solutions to social problems, stemming from disadvantaged local communities to widely known human trafficking and poverty, and its associated challenges.

At Good Cocoa Bean our aim is to transform cocoa sourcing through principled trade. We empower Ghana's smallholder farmers with fair prices, sustainable farming, and education to eradicate child labour, while reinvesting profits into community-led development in Ghana and Scotland. This deliberate shift from business-as-usual creates a circular economy rooted in transparency, fairness, and generational impact.

Working with smallhold farmers in Ghana in 2017 we established the Chamber of Farmers Ghana. The GCF works as a collective of small landowners who are stigmatized as poor and exploited by larger commercial companies. It exists to assist small hold farmers to address the challenges they face in planting, harvesting and accessing routes to market for their cocoa beans and their other small hold produce.

We offer: Coca beans, Coca nibs, Chocolate

W

What: Primary Engineer is a not-for-profit organisation inspiring children and young people — from early years to further education — to see themselves as engineers and problem-solvers. Through hands-on, curriculum-aligned programmes, national competitions, and teacher training, we connect schools with engineers from industry and academia.

We believe engineering is for everyone. By engaging pupils from all backgrounds, including those in areas of high deprivation, we broaden aspirations and build future skills. Our teacher training embeds engineering sustainably, while partnerships with industry support diversity, skills development, and social value goals.

We offer: Primary Engineer helps organisations deliver meaningful outreach, meet social value goals, and inspire the next generation of engineers. We connect businesses directly with schools through programmes in Rail, Vehicle, and Construction, and national competitions such as If You Were an Engineer, What Would You Do? and STATWARS. Our fully managed approach — including teacher training, school recruitment, volunteer coordination, and impact reporting — makes it easy for partners to engage communities, evidence impact, and invest in the long-term skills pipeline.

The Piano Project CIC

Category: Facilities, Professional Development, Circular Economy, Professional Services

Location: West

Covers: Glasgow City, Scotland-wide

www.glasgowpianoproject.co.uk

W

What: We promote the reuse of acoustic pianos, reducing waste to landfills, while nurturing the next generation of piano tuners. We accept donated pianos, which we clean, repair, tune, and refurbish before rehoming them within the community — in hospitals, hospices, public buildings, and community projects, or through affordable sales with long-term, interest-free payment plans.

Pianos beyond repair are dismantled, with their casework repurposed by artists and makers for furniture, artwork, or sculpture. Our 'Lids Open Day' events give free public access to exceptional instruments in iconic venues, while 'Pianos in Public Places' has enabled thousands to experience the joy of spontaneous music-making.

Our work is open to all — helping reduce loneliness and social isolation through the shared experience of music.

We offer: We offer a workspace for other self employed professionals in the piano trade to use to work on piano restoration projects & other jobs they would not otherwise be able to take on. We offer piano hire to businesses, the film & TV industry and corporate conferences.

What: We are a charitable community development trust established in 2011 based at Loanhead Farm in rural Clydesdale on the border of South Lanarkshire and West Lothian. Our vision is: A beautiful and vibrant place, with a great quality of life for all. Our aims are: to support local sustainable economic, environmental, and social development and to own well managed, financially sustainable land and buildings. Our values are: inclusion, honesty, sustainability, belonging and community.

We offer: We've recently redeveloped our Cowbyre into a flexible multi-use venue for events, exhibitions, and conferences, with both indoor and outdoor spaces suitable for all weather. Set within 19 acres, we host camping, outdoor events, and hands-on learning in our community workshop and horticultural areas.

Our dedicated volunteers help people gain new skills and experiences. We also offer e-bike hire and have an EV vehicle for transport support. Partnering with local accommodation providers, we're now renovating our barn to create space for sports, craft fairs, and markets.
